Professor Joshua Lederberg,
Dept. of Genetics,
Stanford University,
Stanford, California.

Dear Lederberg:

A small conference of interested bacterial geneticists will be held at Cold Spring Harbor on June 11 and 12th, during the Symposium (June 7-13). The purpose of the meeting will be to go over the draft of the "Proposal for a uniform nomenclature in bacterial genetics" and to prepare it for publication. The organizers of the conference (Adelberg, Hartman and myself) would like you or a person from your group designated by you to attend. Funds are available for travel expenses (tourist class jet, and $12.- per diem during the period of conference).

The title of this years Symposium is "Synthesis and structure of macromolecules". It will include topics of interest to microbial geneticists; A number of them from U.S. and abroad will be present, and thus available for our conference.

I sincerely hope that you will be in a position to join us. *

With best regards,

Sincerely yours,

M. Demerec
